Final MDL Rule and Privilege Log Amendments

July 2024

After a six-month formal comment period, in June 2024, the Committee on Rules of Practice and Procedure ("Standing Committee") approved final versions of two large rulemakings related to MDLs and privilege logs. The rules package must now pass several rounds of approval, including from the Judicial Conference by September 2024, the Supreme Court by December 2024, and Congress by April 2025. Assuming this process continues uninterrupted, the rules will become effective December 1, 2025. Final versions of each rule are included at the end of this report.

NEW Multidistrict Litigation Rule — FRCP 16.1

The final MDL rule comes seven years after the rule change was originally suggested in 2017, making it one of the longest and most contentious new rules ever considered. In response to public comment, the Advisory Committee made significant improvements to the structure and substance of the proposed rule and corresponding portions of the Committee Note, including:

(1) eliminating the controversial "coordinated counsel" position;

(2) prioritizing the appointment of leadership counsel;

(3) explicitly stating that FRCP 23 governs class actions in the MDL setting;

(4) subdividing the topics for consideration in the initial report into two tiers: topics that are appropriate for early organizational consideration or court action, and issues that may evolve as litigation develops; and

(5) rejecting controversial proposals submitted by the defense bar to require early vetting of "unsubstantiated claims," which were strongly opposed by AAJ and our members.

The Standing Committee approved the new rule with minor edits to address concerns from the antitrust plaintiff's bar regarding the rule's relationship to FRCP 23, to clarify that all (not some) of the topics identified in 16.1(b)(3) may be premature prior to the appointment of leadership, and to simplify the Note regarding the court's consideration of measures to facilitate resolution of actions.

Privilege Log Amendments — FRCP 16(b) & 26(f)

In June, the Standing Committee approved the amendments without making any changes to the version approved by the Advisory Committee on Civil Rules in April. As a reminder, the Advisory Committee rejected defense calls to expand the proposed amendments to favor categorical logging and include a controversial cross-reference to Rule 26(b)(5)(A), but declined to take a position on the issue of overdesignation. The Committee also chose to trim the Note and remove any statements that appeared to favor one side over the other in the interests of neutrality and flexibility, recognizing that "no one size fits all."

NOTE: The Standing Committee made several changes to the rule prior to approving the proposal in June 2024. Standing Committee additions are underlined in red, and deletions are ~~struck through~~.

Rule 16.1. Multidistrict Litigation

(a) Initial Management Conference. After the Judicial Panel on Multidistrict Litigation transfers actions, the transferee court should schedule an initial management conference to develop an initial plan for orderly pretrial activity in the MDL proceedings.

(b) Report for the Conference.

(1) Submitting a Report. The transferee court should order the parties to meet and to submit a report to the court before the conference.

(2) Required Content: the Parties' Views on Leadership Counsel and Other Matters. The report must address any matter the court designates — which may include any matter in Rule 16 — and, unless the court orders otherwise, the parties' views on:

(A) whether leadership counsel should be appointed and, if so:

(i) timing of the appointments;

(ii) the structure of leadership counsel;

(iii) the procedure for selecting leadership and whether the appointments should be reviewed periodically;

(iv) their responsibilities and authority in conducting pretrial activities and any role in facilitating resolution of the MDL proceedings;

(v) the proposed methods for regularly communicating with and reporting to the court and nonleadership counsel;

(vi) any limits on activity by nonleadership counsel;

(vii) whether and when to establish a means 1489 for compensating leadership counsel;

(B) any previously entered scheduling or other orders that should be vacated or modified;

(C) a schedule for additional management conferences with the court;

(D) how to manage the direct filing of new actions in the MDL proceedings; and

(E) whether related actions have been — or are expected to be — filed in other courts, and whether to adopt methods for coordinating with them.

(3) Additional Required Content: the Parties' Initial Views on Various Matters. Unless the court orders otherwise, the report also must address the parties' initial views on:

(A) whether consolidated pleadings should be prepared;

(B) how and when the parties will exchange information about the factual bases for their claims and defenses;

(C) discovery, including any difficult issues that may arise;

(D) any likely pretrial motions;

(E) whether the court should consider any measures to facilitate resolving some or all actions before the court;

(F) whether any matters should be referred to a magistrate judge or a master; and

(G) the principal factual and legal issues likely to be presented.

(4) Permitted Content: The report may include any other matter that the parties wish to bring to the court's attention.

(c) Initial Management Order. After the conference, the court should enter an initial management order addressing the matters in Rule 16.1(b) and, in the court's discretion, any other matters. This order controls the course of the proceedings unless the court modifies it.

COMMITTEE NOTE

The Multidistrict Litigation Act, 28 U.S.C. § 1407, was adopted in 1968. It empowers the Judicial Panel on Multidistrict Litigation to transfer one or more actions for coordinated or consolidated pretrial proceedings to promote the just and efficient conduct of such actions. The number of civil actions subject to transfer orders from the Panel has increased since the statute was enacted but has leveled off in recent years. These actions have accounted for a substantial portion of the federal civil docket. There has been no reference to multidistrict litigation (MDL proceedings) in the Civil Rules. The addition of Rule 16.1 is designed to provide a framework for the initial management of MDL proceedings.

Not all MDL proceedings present the management challenges this rule addresses, and, thus, it is important to maintain flexibility in managing MDL proceedings. Of course, other multiparty litigation that did not result from a Judicial Panel transfer order may present similar management challenges. For example, multiple actions in a single district (sometimes called related cases and assigned by local rule to a single judge) may exhibit characteristics similar to MDL proceedings. In such situations, courts may find it useful to employ procedures similar to those Rule 16.1 identifies in handling those multiparty proceedings. In both MDL proceedings and other multiparty litigation, the Manual for Complex Litigation also may be a source of guidance.

Rule 16.1(a). Rule 16.1(a) recognizes that the transferee judge regularly schedules an initial management conference soon after the Judicial Panel transfer occurs. One purpose of the initial management conference is to begin to develop an initial management plan for the MDL proceedings and, thus, this initial conference may only address some of the matters referenced in Rule 16.1(b)(2)-(3). That initial MDL management conference ordinarily would not be the only management conference held during the MDL proceedings. Although holding an initial management conference in MDL proceedings is not mandatory under Rule 16.1(a), early attention to the matters identified in Rule 16.1(b)(2)-(3) should be of great value to the transferee judge and the parties.

Rule 16.1(b)(1). The court ordinarily should order the parties to meet to submit a report to the court about the matters designated in Rule 16.1(b)(2)-(3) prior to the initial management conference. This should be a single report, but it may reflect the parties' divergent views on these matters.

Rule 16.1(b)(2). Unless the court orders otherwise, the report must address all of the matters identified in Rule 16.1(b)(2) (as well as all those in 16.1(b)(3)). The court also may direct the parties to address any other matter, whether or not listed in Rule 16.1(b) or in Rule 16. Rules 16.1(b) and 16 provide a series of prompts for the court and do not constitute a mandatory checklist for the transferee judge to follow.

The rule distinguishes between the matters identified in Rule 16.1(b)(2)(B)-(E) and in Rule 16.1(b)(3) because court action on ~~some of the~~ a matter~~s~~ identified in Rule 16.1(b)(3) may be premature before leadership counsel is appointed, if that is to occur. For this reason, 16.1(b)(2) calls for the parties' views on the matters designated in (b)(2) whereas 16.1(b)(3) requires only the parties' initial views on those matters listed in (b)(3).

Rule 16.1(b)(2)(C) directs the parties to suggest a schedule for additional management conferences during which the same or other matters may be addressed, and the Rule 16.1(c) initial management order controls only until it is modified. The goal of the initial management conference is to begin to develop an initial management plan, not necessarily to adopt a final plan for the entirety of the MDL proceeding. Experience has shown, however, that the matters identified in Rule 16.1(b)(2)(B)-(E) and Rule 16.1(b)(3) are often important to the management of MDL proceedings.

Rule 16.1(b)(2)(A). Appointment of leadership counsel is not universally needed in MDL proceedings, and the timing of appointments may vary. But, to manage the MDL proceedings, the court may decide to appoint leadership counsel and many times this will be one of the early orders the transferee judge enters. Rule 16.1(b)(2)(A) calls attention to several topics the court should consider if appointment of leadership counsel seems warranted.

The first topic is the timing of appointment of leadership. Ordinarily, transferee judges enter orders appointing leadership counsel separately from orders addressing the matters in Rule 16.1(b)(2)(B)-(E) and 16.1(b)(3).

In some MDL proceedings it may be important that leadership counsel be organized into committees with specific duties and responsibilities. Rule 16.1(b)(2)(A)(ii) therefore prompts counsel to provide the court with specific suggestions on the leadership structure that should be employed.

The procedure for selecting leadership counsel is addressed in item (iii). There is no single method that is best for all MDL proceedings. The transferee judge is responsible to ensure that the lawyers appointed to leadership positions are able to do the work and will responsibly and fairly discharge their leadership obligations. In undertaking this process, a transferee judge should consider the benefits of geographical distribution as well as differing experiences, skills, knowledge, and backgrounds. Courts have considered the nature of the actions and parties, the needs of the litigation, and each lawyer's qualifications, expertise, and access to resources. They have also taken into account how the lawyers will complement one another and work collectively.

MDL proceedings do not have the same commonality requirements as class actions, so substantially different categories of claims or parties may be included in the same MDL proceeding and leadership may be comprised of attorneys who represent parties asserting a range of claims in the MDL proceeding. For example, in some MDL proceedings there may be claims by individuals who suffered injuries and also claims by third-party payors who paid for medical treatment. The court may need to take these differences into account in making leadership appointments.

Courts have selected leadership counsel through combinations of formal applications, interviews, and recommendations from other counsel and judges who have experience with MDL proceedings.

The rule also calls for advising the court whether appointment to leadership should be reviewed periodically. Transferee courts have found that appointment for a term is useful as a management tool for the court to monitor progress in the MDL proceedings.

Item (iv) recognizes that another important role for leadership counsel in some MDL proceedings is to facilitate resolution of claims. Resolution may be achieved by such means as early exchange of information, expedited discovery, pretrial motions, bellwether trials, and settlement negotiations.

An additional task of leadership counsel is to communicate with the court and with nonleadership counsel as proceedings unfold. Item (v) directs the parties to report how leadership counsel will communicate with the court and nonleadership counsel. In some instances, the court or leadership counsel have created websites that permit nonleadership counsel to monitor the MDL proceedings, and sometimes online access to court hearings provides a method for monitoring the proceedings.

Another responsibility of leadership counsel is to organize the MDL proceedings in accordance with the court's initial management order under Rule 16.1(c). In some MDL proceedings, there may be tension between the approach that leadership counsel takes in handling pretrial matters and the preferences of individual parties and nonleadership counsel. As item (vi) recognizes, it may be necessary for the court to give priority to leadership counsel's pretrial plans when they conflict with initiatives sought by nonleadership counsel.

The court should, however, ensure that nonleadership counsel have suitable opportunities to express their views to the court, and take care not to interfere with the responsibilities nonleadership counsel owe their clients.

Finally, item (vii) addresses whether and when to establish a means to compensate leadership counsel for their added responsibilities. Courts have entered orders pursuant to the common benefit doctrine establishing specific protocols for the management of case staffing, timekeeping, cost reimbursement, and related common benefit issues. But it may be best to defer entering a specific order relating to a common benefit fee and expenses until well into the proceedings, when the court is more familiar with the effects of such an order and the activities of leadership counsel.

If proposed class actions are included within the MDL proceeding, Rule 23(g) applies to appointment of class counsel should the court eventually certify one or more classes, and the court may also choose to appoint interim class counsel before resolving the certification question. In such MDL proceedings, the court must be alert to the relative responsibilities of leadership counsel under Rule 16.1 and class counsel under Rule 23(g). Rule 16.1 does not displace Rule 23~~(g)~~.

Rule 16.1(b)(2)(B)-(E) and (3). Rule 16.1(b)(2) and (3) identify a number of matters that often are important in the management of MDL proceedings. The matters identified in Rule 16.1(b)(2)(B)-(E) frequently call for early action by the court. The matters identified by Rule 16.1(b)(3) are in a separate paragraph of the rule because, in the absence of appointment of 1630 leadership counsel should appointment be warranted, the parties may be able to provide only their initial views on these matters at the conference.

Rule 16.1(b)(2)(B). When multiple actions are transferred to a single district pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1407, those actions may have reached different procedural stages in the district courts from which they were transferred. In some, Rule 26(f) conferences may have occurred and Rule 16(b) scheduling orders may have been entered. Those scheduling orders are likely to vary. Managing the centralized MDL proceedings in a consistent manner may warrant vacating or modifying scheduling orders or other orders entered in the transferor district courts, as well as any scheduling orders previously entered by the transferee judge.

Rule 16.1(b)(2)(C). The Rule 16.1(a) conference is the initial management conference. Although there is no requirement that there be further management conferences, courts generally conduct management conferences throughout the duration of the MDL proceeding to effectively manage the litigation and promote clear, orderly, and open channels of communication between the parties and the court on a regular basis.

Rule 16.1(b)(2)(D). When large numbers of tagalong actions (actions that are filed in or removed to federal court after the Judicial Panel has created the MDL proceeding) are anticipated, some parties have stipulated to "direct filing" orders entered by the court to provide a method to avoid the transferee judge receiving numerous cases through transfer rather than direct filing. If a direct filing order is entered, it is important to address other matters that can arise, such as properly handling any jurisdictional or venue issues that might be presented, identifying the appropriate district court for remand at the end of the pretrial phase, how time limits such as statutes of limitations should be handled, and how choice of law issues should be addressed. Sometimes liaison counsel may be appointed specifically to report on developments in related litigation (e.g.,state courts and bankruptcy courts) at the case management conferences.

Rule 16.1(b)(2)(E). On occasion there are actions in other courts that are related to the MDL proceeding. Indeed, a number of state court systems have mechanisms like § 1407 to aggregate separate actions in their courts. In addition, it may happen that a party to an MDL proceeding is a party to another action that presents issues related 1657 to or bearing on issues in the MDL proceeding.

The existence of such actions can have important consequences for the management of the MDL proceeding. For example, the coordination of overlapping discovery is often important. If the court is considering adopting a common benefit fund order, consideration of the relative importance of the various proceedings may be important to ensure a fair arrangement. It is important that the MDL transferee judge be aware of whether such actions in other courts have been filed or are anticipated.

Rule 16.1(b)(3). As compared to the matters listed in Rule 16.1(b)(2)(B)-(E), Rule 16.1(b)(3) identifies matters that may be more fully addressed once leadership is appointed, should leadership be recommended, and thus, in their report the parties may only be able to provide their initial views on these matters.

Rule 16.1(b)(3)(A). For case management purposes, some courts have required consolidated pleadings, such as master complaints and answers, in addition to short form complaints. Such consolidated pleadings may be useful for determining the scope of discovery and may also be employed in connection with pretrial motions, such as motions under Rule 12 or Rule 56. The Rules of Civil Procedure, including the pleading rules, continue to apply in all MDL proceedings. The relationship between the consolidated pleadings and individual pleadings filed in or transferred to the MDL proceedings depends on the purpose of the consolidated pleadings in the MDL proceeding. Decisions regarding whether to use master pleadings can have significant implications in MDL proceedings, as the Supreme Court noted in Gelboim v. Bank of America Corp., 574 U.S. 405, 413 n.3 (2015).

Rule 16.1(b)(3)(B). In some MDL proceedings, concerns have been raised on both the plaintiff side and the defense side that some claims and defenses have been asserted without the inquiry called for by Rule 11(b). Experience has shown that in many cases an early exchange of information about the factual bases for claims and defenses can facilitate efficient management. Some courts have utilized "fact sheets" or a "census" as methods to take a survey of the claims and defenses presented, largely as a management method for planning and organizing the proceedings. Such methods can be used early on when information is being exchanged between the parties or during the discovery process addressed in Rule 16.1(b)(3)(C).

The level of detail called for by such methods should be carefully considered to meet the purpose to be served and avoid undue burdens. Early exchanges may depend on a number of factors, including the types of cases before the court. And the timing of these exchanges may depend on other factors, such as motions to dismiss or other early matters and their impact on the early exchange of information. Other factors might include whether there are issues that should be addressed early in the proceeding (e.g., jurisdiction, general causation, or preemption) and the number of plaintiffs in the MDL proceeding.

This court-ordered exchange of information may be ordered independently from the discovery rules, which are addressed in Rule 16.1(b)(3)(C). Alternatively, in some cases, transferee judges have ordered that such exchanges of information be made under Rule 33 or 34. Under some circumstances – after taking account of whether the party whose claim or defense is involved has reasonable access to needed information – the court may find it appropriate to employ expedited methods to resolve claims or defenses not supported after the required information exchange.

Rule 16.1(b)(3)(C). A major task for the MDL transferee judge is to supervise discovery in an efficient manner. The principal issues in the MDL proceeding may help guide the discovery plan and avoid inefficiencies and unnecessary duplication.

Rule 16.1(b)(3)(D). Early attention to likely pretrial motions can be important to facilitate progress and efficiently manage the MDL proceedings. The manner and timing in which certain legal and factual issues are to be addressed by the court can be important in determining the most efficient method for discovery.

Rule 16.1(b)(3)(E). Whether or not the court has appointed leadership counsel, the court may consider measures to facilitate the resolution of some or all actions before the court. ~~it may be that judicial assistance could facilitate the resolution of some or all actions before the transferee court. Ultimately, the question of whether parties reach a settlement is just that—a decision to be made by the parties. But the court may assist the parties in efforts at resolution~~. In MDL–proceedings, in addition to mediation and other dispute resolution alternatives, focused discovery orders, timely adjudication of principal legal issues, selection of representative bellwether trials, and coordination with state courts may facilitate resolution. Ultimately, the question of whether parties reach a settlement is just that—a decision to be made by the parties.

Rule 16.1(b)(3)(F). MDL transferee judges may refer matters to a magistrate judge or a master to expedite the pretrial process or to play a part in facilitating communication between the parties, including but not limited to settlement negotiations. It can be valuable for the court to know the parties' positions about the possible appointment of a master before considering whether such an appointment should be made. Rule 53 prescribes procedures for appointment of a master.

Rule 16.1(b)(3)(G). Orderly and efficient pretrial activity in MDL proceedings can be facilitated by early identification of the principal factual and legal issues likely to be presented. Depending on the issues presented, the court may conclude that certain factual issues should be pursued through early discovery, and certain legal issues should be addressed through early motion practice.

Rule 16.1(b)(4). In addition to the matters the court has directed counsel to address, the parties may choose to discuss and report about other matters that they believe the transferee judge should address at the initial management conference.

Rule 16.1(c). Effective and efficient management of MDL proceedings benefits from a comprehensive management order. An initial management order need not address all matters designated under Rule 16.1(b) if the court determines the matters are not significant to the MDL proceeding or would better be addressed in a subsequent order. There is no requirement under Rul 16.1 that the court set specific time limits or other scheduling provisions as in ordinary litigation under Rule 16(b)(3)(A). Because active judicial management of MDL proceedings must be flexible, the court should be open to modifying its initial management order in light of developments in the MDL proceedings. Such modification may be particularly appropriate if leadership counsel is appointed after the initial management conference under Rule 16.1(a).

COMMITTEE NOTE

Rule 16(b) is amended in tandem with an amendment to Rule 26(f)(3)(D). In addition, two words – "and management" – are added to the title of this rule in recognition that it contemplates that the court will in many instances do more than establish a schedule in its Rule 16(b) order; the focus of this amendment is an illustration of such activity.

The amendment to Rule 26(f)(3)(D) directs the parties to discuss and include in their discovery plan a method for complying with the requirements in Rule 26(b)(5)(A). It also directs that the discovery plan address the timing for compliance with this requirement, in order to avoid problems that can arise if issues about compliance emerge only at the end of the discovery period.

Early attention to the particulars on this subject can avoid problems later in the litigation by establishing case specific procedures up front. It may be desirable for the Rule 16(b) order to provide for "rolling" production that may identify possible disputes about whether certain withheld materials are indeed protected. If the parties are unable to resolve those disputes, it is often desirable to have them resolved at an early stage by the court, in part so that the parties can apply the court's resolution of the issues in further discovery in the case.

Because the specific method of complying with Rule 26(b)(5)(A) depends greatly on the specifics of a given case there is no overarching standard for all cases. In the first instance, the parties themselves should discuss these specifics during their Rule 26(f) conference; these amendments to Rule 16(b) recognize that the court can provide direction early in the case. Though the court ordinarily will give much weight to the parties' preferences, the court's order prescribing the method for complying with Rule 26(b)(5)(A) does not depend on party agreement. But the parties may report that it is too early to settle on a specific method, and the court should be open to modifying its order should modification be warranted by evolving circumstances in the case.

* * * * *

COMMITTEE NOTE

Rule 26(f)(3)(D) is amended to address concerns about application of the requirement in Rule 26(b)(5)(A), which requires that producing parties describe materials withheld on grounds of privilege or as trial-preparation materials in a manner that "will enable other parties to assess the claim." Compliance with Rule 26(b)(5)(A) can involve very large burdens for all parties.

Rule 26(b)(5)(A) was adopted in 1993, and from the outset was intended to recognize the need for flexibility. This amendment directs the parties to address the question of how they will comply with Rule 26(b)(5)(A) in their discovery plan, and report to the court about this topic. A companion amendment to Rule 16(b)(3)(B)(iv) seeks to prompt the court to include provisions about complying with Rule 26(b)(5)(A) in scheduling or case management orders.

This amendment also seeks to provide the parties maximum flexibility in designing an appropriate method for identifying the grounds for withholding materials. Depending on the nature of the litigation, the nature of the materials sought through discovery, and the nature of the privilege or protection involved, what is needed in one case may not be necessary in another. No one-size-fits-all approach would actually be suitable in all cases.

Requiring that discussion of this topic begin at the outset of the litigation and that the court be advised of the parties' plans or disagreements in this regard is a key purpose of this amendment, and should minimize problems later on, particularly if objections to a party's compliance with Rule 26(b)(5)(A) might otherwise emerge only at the end of the discovery period. Production of a privilege log near the close of the discovery period can create serious problems. Often it will be valuable to provide for "rolling" production of materials and an appropriate description of the nature of the withheld material. In that way, areas of potential dispute may be identified and, if the parties cannot resolve them, presented to the court for resolution.
